What are amorphous metals?

Amorphous metals are metals with an amorphous structure. Amorphous metals are subjected to rapid cooling, resulting in an amorphous structure in which the atoms are randomly arranged without crystallization. Because it is amorphous and free of defects caused by grain boundaries, it has a higher strength and is therefore very strong.

How amorphous metals are produced?

Amorphous metals are produced in using a rapid solidification technology where molten metal is cast into thin solid ribbons by cooling at a rate of one million $^{\circ}\text{C}/\text{second}$. Amorphous magnetic metal has high permeability due to no crystalline magnetic anisotropy.
