Does Home Depot sell battery-powered outdoor equipment?

One of the buzziest aisles in Home Depot is the one with battery-powered outdoor equipment like mowers and leaf blowers. Lowe's also has seen sales growth in the category. For more than two decades, manufacturers have offered battery-powered tools. The first electric outdoor equipment hit Home Depot and Lowe's shelves in the mid-2000s.

Why is outdoor power equipment so popular?

The current trends of remote and hybrid working models, as well as flexible working hours among businesses in the U.S., have ensured that people have more free time on their hands to indulge in gardening and landscaping, thus strengthening the U.S. market demand for outdoor power equipment.

Is there a threat to outdoor power equipment?

The threat of substitutes is very low, as outdoor power equipment are undergoing technological developments to further improve their functioning and efficiency. The end-user base is significantly large, consisting of both households and commercial establishments.

Who makes outdoor power equipment?

The U.S. market for outdoor power equipment is populated with several global and country manufacturers, leading to a high frequency of product launches. For instance, in February 2023, Ariens, a brand of AriensCo, launched the RAZOR walk-behind mower.

Will Home Depot sell 85% of its outdoor power equipment in 2029?

Home Depot touted the products at an investor day in New York City earlier this month, and it recently set a goal to have more than 85% of its U.S. and Canada sales in outdoor power equipment run on rechargeable batteries instead of gas by late January 2029. It declined to say where the share of sales is today.

Do outdoor power equipment run on batteries?

Outdoor power equipment that run on batteries offer benefits such as zero fuel usage, zero engine exhaust generation, and much lower noise when compared to gas-powered equipment. As a result, modern homeowners looking to contribute to better environment health are major buyers of such products.
