What is a double glazed glass roof?

Our custom glass roofs are ideal for creating glazed extensions or aluminium conservatories, with a lean-to or pitched glass roof set above fixed frame windows and/or bifold or sliding doors. Framed with thermally broken aluminium rafters the double glazed glass roofs are a modern alternative to traditional glass roofs.

What is a glass roof system?

Each glass roof system is designed and manufactured to order to the exact specification of a project, whether you need a roof lantern or roof light to sit on top of the flat roof of a renovation or a custom-engineered solution for a glass extension.

What type of glass is used in roofing systems?

Strengthened glass is, therefore, used in roofing systems. Glass used in most applications has multiple panels in its construction. Double or triple panel glass is good for clear ceilings. The choice of double or triple panes depends on the degree of energy efficiency that you want to achieve.

What is a good alternative to a glass roof?

For example, double glazing with 6mm glass would be 30 kg/m<sup>2</sup>. The best alternative glazing option to a glass roof is Axiard Solid Glazing sheets. These clear sheets offer similar amounts of natural light and visual appearance to glass but are shatterproof, can be trimmed to size and easily installed by a DIYer/homeowner.

How do I choose a glass roof?

If you aren't wanting the openness of a full glass roof, then building a solid roof with flat glass roof lights is another commonly chosen route. When designing your glass roof, the other key visual decision is whether you use self-supporting or timber supported glazing bars.
